

ABOUT COMPANY

At Universal Exports Freight Ltd., we're curious people. We care about what's happening "outside the box", beyond the standard parameters of logistics.

We seek to understand our customers' unique business needs. To see the world from their perspective. That means continually re-thinking assumptions, questioning the status quo.

Ultimately, there's one thing our customers really want to know: that we'll always go out of our way to figure out the best solutions to help our customers.

The difference between intermodal and multimodal transport is in the contract. In multimodal transportation, one contract covers the entire journey, and one carrier takes sole responsibility and ensures door-to-door delivery is completed, even if other carriers are used in the journey. In intermodal transportation, there is a separate contract for each individual leg of the journey. Multimodal transport uses only one transport contract and several means of transport and units of measure can be combined to transport goods, whereas intermodal transport uses several transport contracts and a single means of transport.
